

Common Behavioral Health Definitions

Co-occurring Disorders: A person has both mental health and substance use issues

Outpatient: Treatment takes place in a community program setting. Patients do not stay overnight

Inpatient: Treatment takes place in a residential, hospital, or treatment facility. Patient stays overnight for an extended period of time

Recovery/Resource Centers: Centers where a person can get information on many types of treatment, recovery and support options including peer support

Support Groups: Groups that do not provide licensed treatment but can offer support

Crisis Hotline: A phone number an individual can call, usually 24/7 when there is a mental health or substance use emergency

Mobile Crisis: immediate response by a team of health professionals in the community for people experiencing a mental health crisis

Peer Services: Persons with personal experience specially trained to work with people

Detox: Programs help remove substances from your body with the help of licensed medical professionals. This could happen in an inpatient or outpatient setting

Respite Services: Short-term relief to people who are caring for family members who might need more support outside of the home. There are different models for providing respite care depending on how much support is needed

Medication Assisted Treatment (MAT): Treatment approach for opioid misuse using medications given by a medical professional.

If you are not ready for substance use treatment, there are other options available:

Harm Reduction programs give you ways to lower the chance of overdose and other dangers that come with substance use such as getting HIV/Hep C and other illnesses including:

- Naloxone: medication that temporarily stops an opioid overdose and saves lives
- Syringe Exchange: free sterile syringes and collects used syringes from injection drug users

For more information on harm reduction services, reach out to CHASI's Harm Reduction Program 718-808-1800.

STATEN ISLAND BEHAVIORAL HEALTH RESOURCE GUIDE

Your guide to

Substance Use, Mental Health Treatment and Support Services

The Staten Island Partnership for Community Wellness (SIPCW) and the Staten Island Performing Provider System (SI PPS) are nonprofit organizations working to connect the community with behavioral health resources. This guide gives definitions for common behavioral health terms and local resources on Staten Island.

What is Behavioral Health?

Behavioral Health is a state of well-being that includes our social, emotional, physical, and psychological conditions. Behavioral health services address mental health and substance misuse disorders.

Behavioral Health issues are different for everyone and require different levels of care. The following outpatient providers can help you or your loved ones find services that are appropriate and connect you to care in your community including inpatient, residential, or other services. Many of these state licensed providers address both substance use and mental health issues.

Behavioral Health issues can impact families and loved ones. Many of these providers offer counseling services for loved ones and families of a person with behavioral health issues.
